A New Hobby Gives You A Brand New Interest!

Yes, anyone from 5 to 80 can draw or sketch on paper anything now—the very first time you use the "Magic Art Reproducer" like a professional artist—no matter how hopeless you think you are! An unlimited variety and amount of drawings can be made. Art is admired and respected by everyone. Most hobbies are expensive, but drawing costs very little—just some inexpensive paper, pencils, crayons, or paint. No costly upkeep, nothing to wear out, no parts to replace. It automatically reproduces anything you want to draw on any sheet of paper. Then easily and quickly follow the lines of the picture made with your pen, and you have an accurate original drawing that anyone would think an artist had done. No guesswork, no judging sizes and shapes. Reproduces black and white and actual colors for paintings.

Also makes drawing larger or smaller as you wish.

Anyone can use it on any desk, table, board, etc., indoors or outdoors. Light and compact to be taken wherever you wish. No other lessons or practice or talent needed. You'll be proud to frame your original drawings for a more distinctive touch to your home. Give them to friends as gifts that are different, appreciated.

Have fun! Be popular! Everyone will ask you to draw them. You'll be in demand. After a short time, you may find you can draw well without the "Magic Art Reproducer" because you have developed a "knack" and feeling artists have, which may lead to a good paying art career.

RAIN-AND- A-BOW

"They ought to do something about the weather," complained Raro the Rabbit. "First it looks like we are going to have rain. Then when you get ready for the drops to fall everything changes. The clouds go away and out comes Mr. Sun. This makes you happy and you decide to take a little run on the other side of the lake. Then what happens? The clouds come back again. It is driving me crazy."

"Suppose we start from the last thing you said," suggested Froggo the Frog. "I am completely puzzled. You said it is driving you crazy. I do not see you driving anything. You are right here next to me on the side of the Big Rock. Furthermore I should know every place around the lake for at least a hundred miles in all directions. There is no such a place called Crazy. So please explain to me how you can be driving — when you aren't — to a place that isn't?"

"Sorry," apologized the rabbit. "I was just using something I once heard a human say. Happened about five years ago if my memory is still sound. A little boy was asking his father to get him a big airplane, for his birthday, a yacht, ten thousand machine guns, a swimming pool, an elephant, a tiger, a big mountain, and a thousand gallons of ice cream. When the little boy stopped talking I heard the father make that remark."

"Don't be silly like some humans are," interrupted Squaro the Squirrel. "It is just an expression. People say things they really do not mean. We are all interested in the weather. What can we do about it?"

"Now when you talk about the weather I have some remarks to make," said the Big Rock. "Just remember that I have been around for a long long time. I remember the big snow storm we had in the year 1623. And then there was that terrible rainstorm we had in 1789. And in 1846 we had a very hot summer. But in 1902 we had a very cold summer and a very hot winter. Seems to me that nobody likes the weather. When it is warm, we want it to be cold. When it is cold, we want it to be warm. When there is no rain, we want rain. When we get rain, we want it to stop. Then we long to have some snow. When it comes, we want it to melt. No wonder the weather it all mixed up. Seems to me we are mixed up too. We should once and for all make up our minds as to what kind of weather we want and stick to it."

Suddenly a cloud in the sky started to get lower and lower until it was directly overhead the Big Rock. For a moment it looked like rain. Mr. Cloud spoke what was on his mind.

"A very good suggestion from the Big Rock. We clouds would like to oblige. But it is terrible. Even humans do not know what they want when it comes to the weather. Let me tell you what I overheard last night. I was passing over a house in Freeport. A window was open. I just couldn't really help listening. The husband said to his wife: "I hope tomorrow will be a nice sunny day so I can get up early and go fishing."

You will admit that from his viewpoint the request was reasonable. Of course I will concede that the fish in the lake would prefer it rain. That will keep the fishermen at home. But what do you think his wife said? These are her very words; "I hope it rains so you can stay home and help me fix the rugs, move the furniture, and paint the kitchen. And don't think that you are any different. Yesterday I heard Froggo the Frog say he wanted it to rain today. Why? Because it would make the ground muddy and he likes to play in mudholes. But Squaro the Squirrel said he wanted no rain today. He wanted it to be nice and sunny. He wanted Mr. Sun to stay out all day long so he could go and collect some acorns to put away for next winter."

The Sun began to get hotter and hotter. Some thing was happening. Then they heard the powerful voice of Mr Sun Speak.

"You are certainly all mixed up down there. I shine every day. That's the job that was given to me. Some think I go to sleep at night. I have a twenty four hour day to work and no time off to rest. While one half of the world looks at Mr. Moon, the other half looks at me. Then we switch around. I am there every day. Just ask for me and you can get me."

"Then why does it rain?" demanded Froggo the Frog.

"The rain making belongs to Mr. Cloud," snapped back Mr Sun who was beginning to get a bit annoyed. "I do not help to make the rain."

"Oh yes, you do!" contradicted Mr. Cloud. "You shine on the water and it evaporates. That means it starts going up. When my rain reservoir is empty that is how I get a new supply of water to turn into rain. Without your help I could never send any rain down upon the Earth. A cloud without rain would be useless and even silly. You are to blame."

"Ha, ha," interrupted the chilly voice of Mr Wind. "You seem to have all forgotten that I exist. Want me to show you how you can get rain in a few minutes? I simply puff and huff with all my might. I blow one cloud against the other. Then they start to pour rain on the Earth."

"How did you get into this debate?" demanded Mr. Cloud. "I have a lot of friends and relations up in the sky. We aren't afraid of you at all. Go ahead and huff and puff."

"I didn't say huff and puff," corrected Mr Wind. "I said puff and huff. First I puff and then I huff. You want me to huff and then puff? If I did it that way you would get a terrible windstorm. I have some sense in my head."

"I am not so certain about that," said the Big Oak Tree who had been quietly listening to what was being said. "I have a complaint to make. And to you, Mr. Wind. Last Thursday morning for no reason at all you started to puff and huff. I lost one hundred and ten nice leaves. They fell to the ground. It wasn't time for them to fall down until next month. You are getting careless with the way you huff and puff. Furthermore there is a nest on my seventeenth branch. You almost blew it down. Be more considerate of your actions in the future."

"If you want me to blow the leaves back again I can do so," suggested Mr Wind. "But I don't like to be told what to do. I am very old. At least a couple of million years or so."

"So what?" laughed Raro the Rabbit. "Nobody really wants to be told what to do. But if we are going to do the right thing we must listen to good sound advice. Just because you are so old and powerful doesn't give you the right to do the wrong thing.

"I am sorry if I was rude," replied Mr. Wind. "Maybe it is my pride that has been hurt. Years ago ships crossed the oceans by my power. I would blow upon their sails. I could make them go fast or slow. Or even not move at all. And then there were the windmills. I would blow and the windmill would start to operate. Alas! Things have changed. I am almost out of work. Maybe I ought to get unemployment compensation. Seems I am not wanted anymore."

"This hurts my heart," sighed Mr. Cloud. "It is terrible when you are no longer wanted. I think I am going to cry."

And all of a sudden Mr. Cloud started to cry and rain began to fall upon the Earth. The rabbit, the squirrel, and the frog ran for cover. The more Mr Cloud thought about poor Mr. Wind — the more he cried. And the more he cried — the more rain he began to pour on the Earth.

"You better stop this nonsense," shouted Mr. Sun. "There is a big picnic in Spring Valley. Everyone will get wet. And the weatherman said on the radio it would not rain today."

"If he heard the sad story from Mr. Cloud I am certain he would cry," insisted Mr. Cloud. "I too would feel terrible if nobody would want me. You just test me. Tell me to go away. Tell me I am not wanted. And you will really see me cry."

"Hey, stop it!" shouted the Big Oak Tree. "If we don't tell you to stop crying it will continue to rain. Then you tell us if we tell you to go away you will cry more. Which will give us more rain. Hasn't anyone around here some sense?"

"Watch me," shouted Mr. Sun. "You are really going to get a treat. I have been waiting for the past three weeks for just such a rain. This is the perfect rain."

And then everybody saw something wonderful. Mr Sun kept on shining right through the rain. And a beautiful rainbow appeared in the sky.

"Is there a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow?" asked Raro the Rabbit.

"I wish I could take home this rainbow and show it to my cousin the next time he comes to visit me," remarked Froggo the Frog.

"It was so nice of Mr. Cloud to rain so we could get a perfect rainbow," added Squaro the Squirrel.

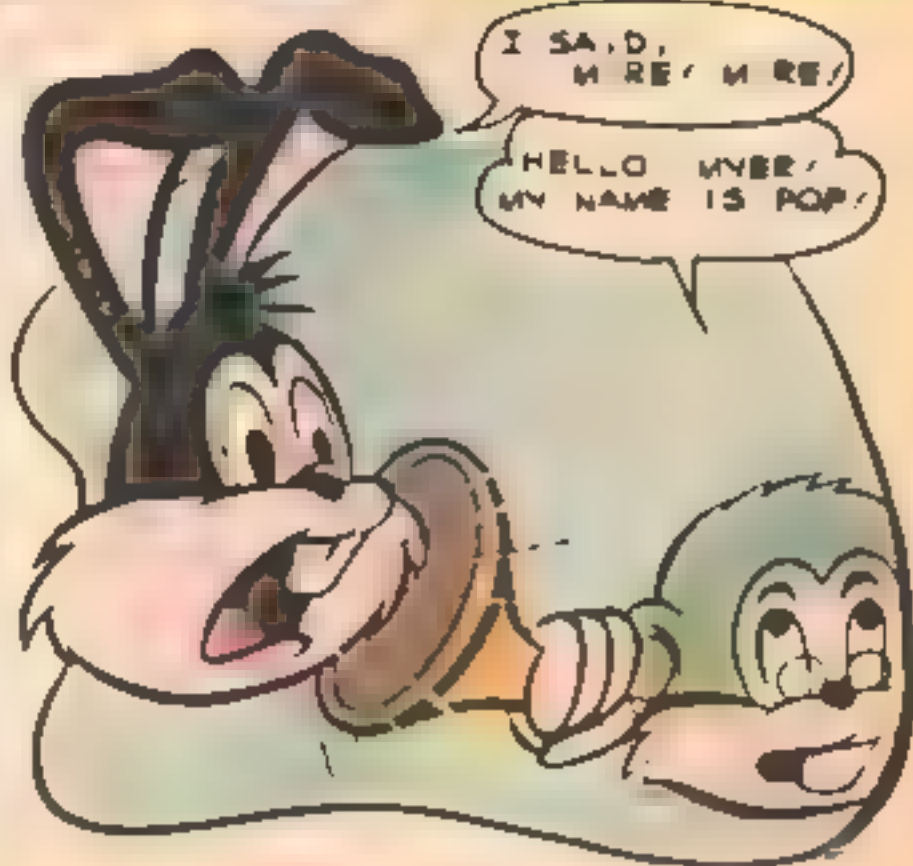

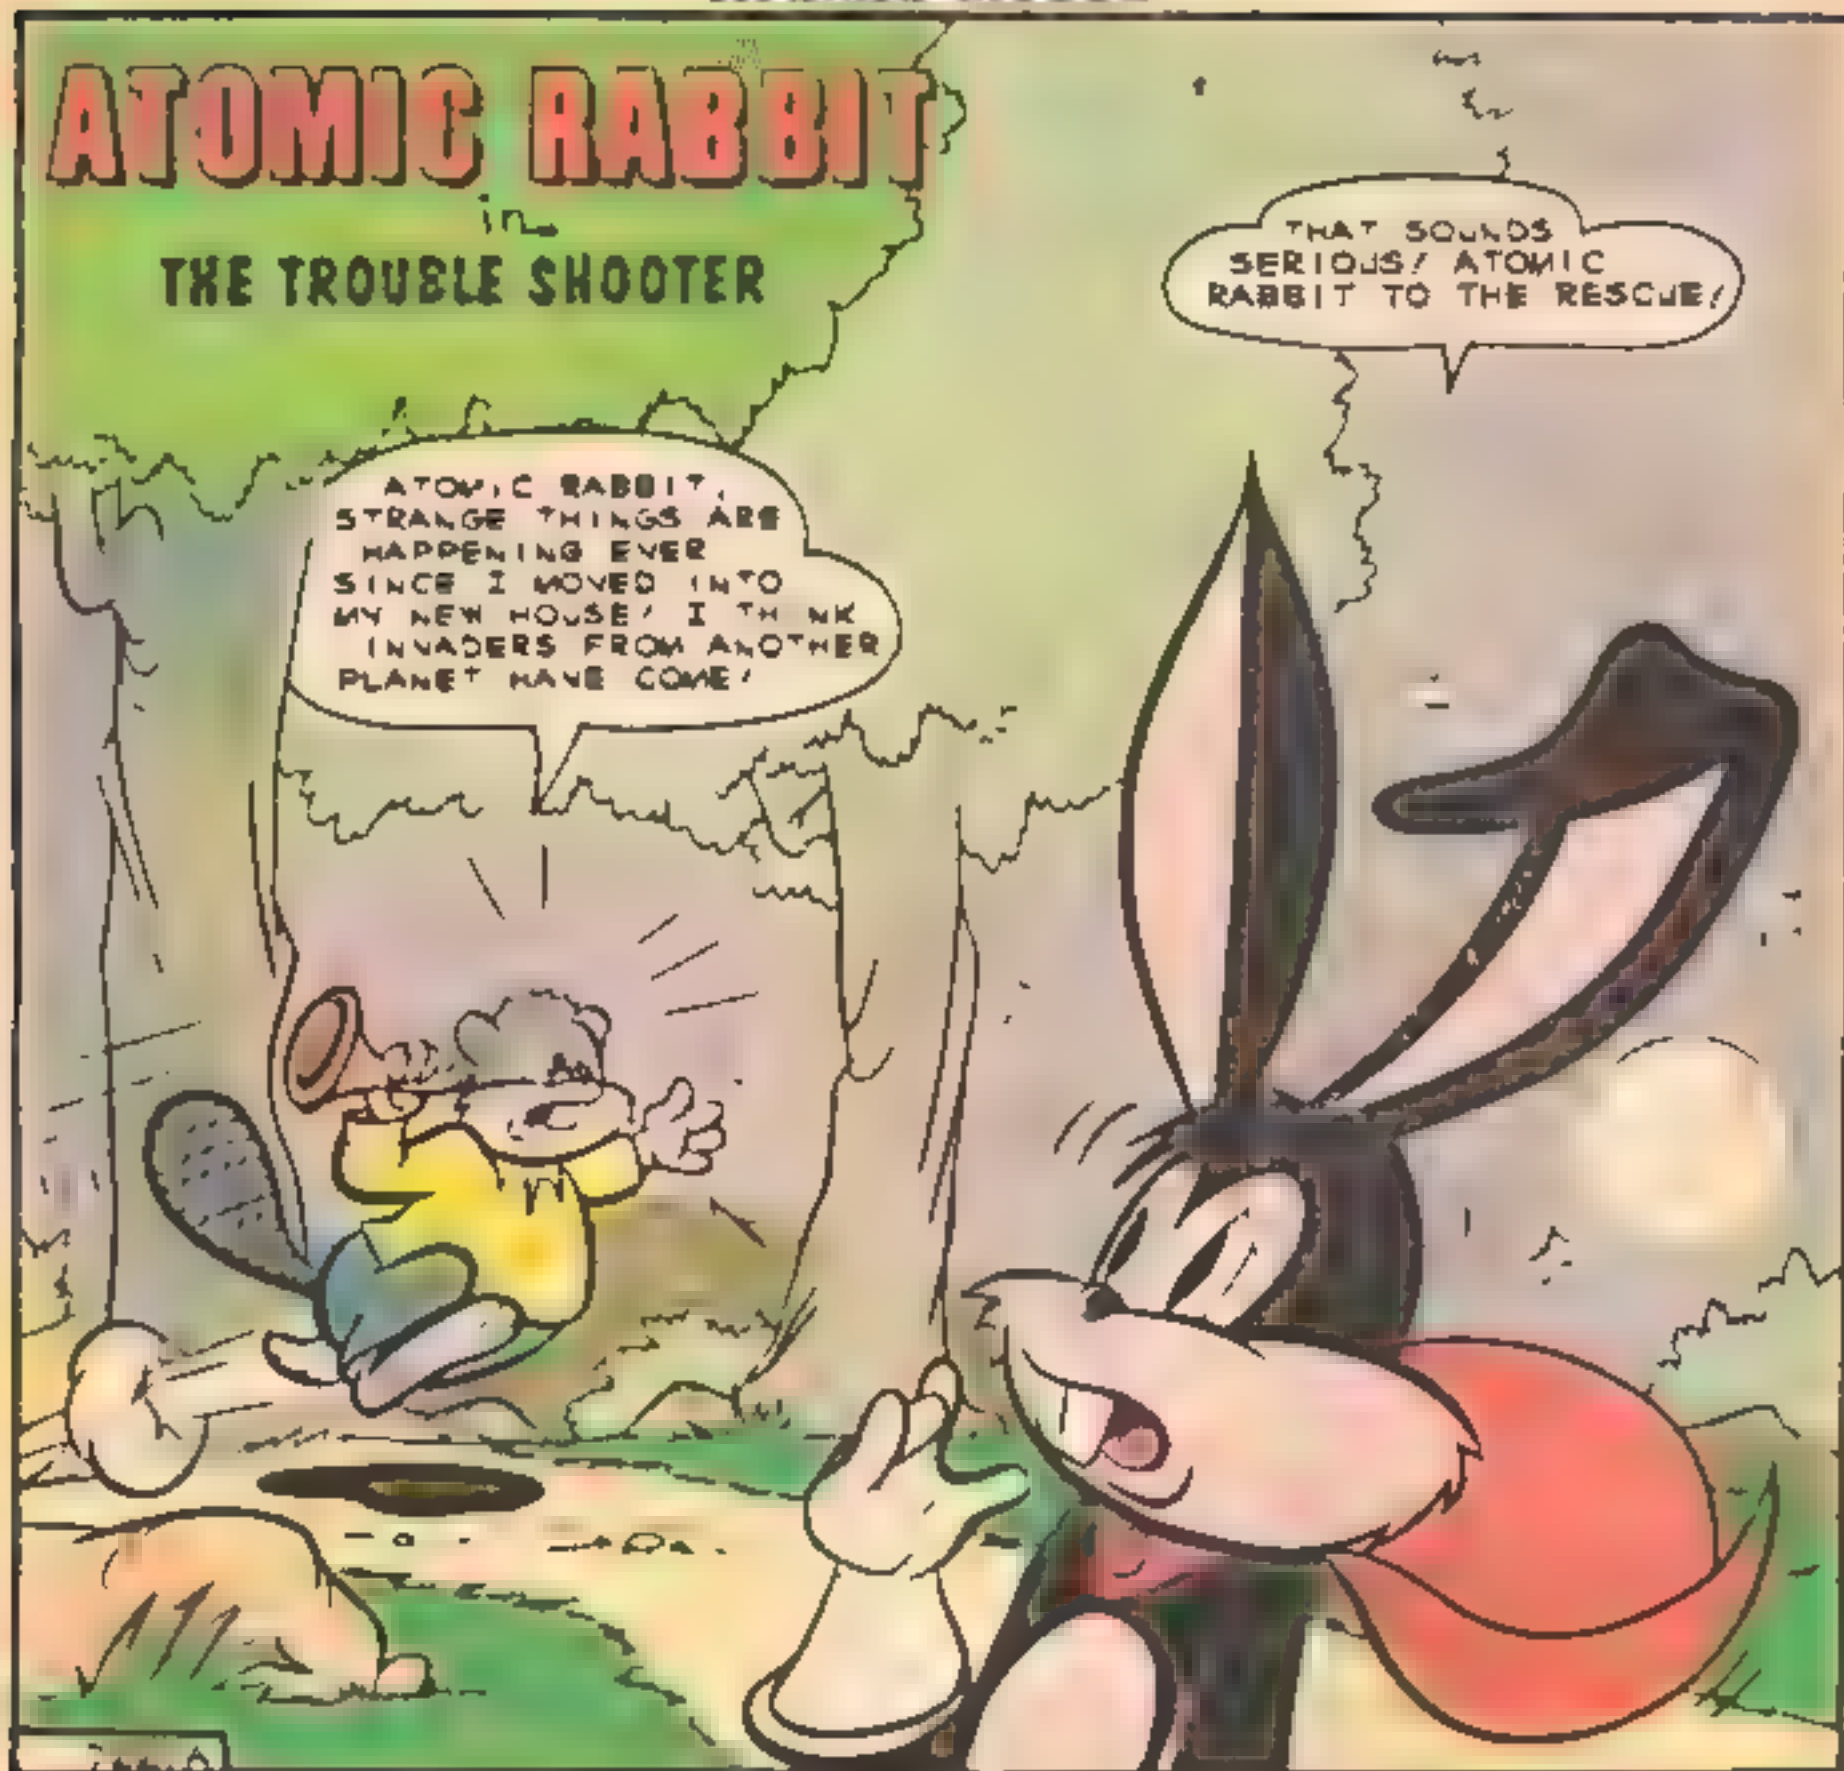

"It even makes me happy," said Mr. Wind.

Then if you are happy — I am happy. So no more rain," laughed Mr. Cloud. "You want to know something? It really is a beautiful rainbow."
